EDMONDS CAMPAIGN OPTIMISTIC AFTER BROWN WIN IN MASSACHUSETTS

MORRIS, OK – Daniel Edmonds, the conservative candidate for Oklahoma’s Second U.S. Congressional District, is very optimistic about reclaiming the seat with a conservative voice after Scott Brown, also a conservative, won the special election Senate race in Massachusetts.

“If a conservative can win a statewide election in one of the more liberal states in our nation,” Edmonds said, “then we can reclaim the Second District of Oklahoma with a true conservative. The conservative message is one of respect for the Constitution, of respect for all human life, of personal responsibility, and of a fiscally responsible and limited government. This is the right message for Oklahoma and for America. We must choose the right messenger to represent us and deliver that message in Washington. I’m asking my fellow citizens to consider me for their messenger and vote for me as the representative of the Second District.”

Edmonds, a farmer and rancher and a native of the Second District, is campaigning for the seat currently held by Dan Boren. To learn more about Edmonds’ campaign, visit <http://danieledmonds.org>.
